Briefing:

Buying new books can end up being expensive and harmful for the environment in the long run. ReadCycler was designed to solve those problems and help users give a new use to their old books. Instead of letting yours stay put forever in a dusty shelf you can instead trade them for something you have interest in reading.

Scenarios:

Scenario 1

Roberto has some books he wants to trade so he goes to ReadCycler and logs in. He then registers the book "Harry Potter" on the website. He goes to the explorer page to see the books the app contains and sees a book that caught his attention: "Lord of the Rings" he sees who is trading the book and there are two people, so he chooses the one that is closer to him and sends a request. The next day he sees that his request was denied so he sends a request to the second person closest to him. He checks his profile to see if he can trust him, he has a great review! Roberto sends a request and waits. And the request is accepted. He then contacts the owner of "Lord of the Rings", Quim. They arrange a place and time to exchange the books. They also say when they want the book back. They will have 4 months to read the books and then will return the books at the same place.

Scenario 2

Roberto just finished reading Hunger Games Catching Fire and was now looking forward to reading another book, "A Game of Thrones". So he decided to try the site ReadCycler. He searched for the book he was looking for and found a guy named Quim suggesting a trade book by book with returning after the read. He then proceeded to perform the trade and after Roberto finished his reading he tried to contact Quim but with no results. Even 2 weeks after that he couldn't reach him so he decided to report him. A few days later Quim's account was flagged by the moderator team.

Scenario 3

Roberto wants to read some books but he has already finished his collection and has no idea what to read next. He then remembers he did some trades in the ReadCycler App and goes there to find something appealing. After logging in and filling his interest list on the app, he sees that the recommended section refreshed. He then proceeds to search this section for something he likes. After that, he sees "Total Recall by Arnold Schwarzenegger" and really wants it. He proceeds to check the available trades or offers and makes a request!
